

Welcome to Torino!

This city of nearly one million inhabitants was funded by the Romans as a military outpost to become one of the main cities of the Italian state. It then became the first Italian Capital City after the unification of the Nation.

The city is full of historical places, from Roman ruins to the Royal palace. You'll need more than the two days of the conference to visit it!

The conference will be hosted in Politecnico di Torino, a State University founded in 1906 that nowadays counts more than 31'000 students, strong connections with some of the biggest industries in Italy and worldwide, and an incessantly growing performance in all the fields of engineering research.
